The Asmat language area begins about 60 kilometers west of Sempan, where the Jac River forms its western boundary. Between the Jac and the Sirac (Eilanden) River, Asmat occupies almost the whole coastal plain. Its eastern and southern border runs roughly parallel with the Sirac at a distance of 30-40 kilometers east and south from it. Only near [sic] and along the coast has the language area an extension further south: in a gradually narrowing strip it extends as far as the northern entrance of the Digul River. Drabbe distinguishes five main dialects within Asmat: a Northern dialect on the upper Lorentz and Noord Rivers; a Central-Coast dialect; a Southern or Casuarina Coast dialect; a Central dialect on the lower Sirac and As (Kampong) Rivers; and the Citak dialect east of the confluence of the Wildeman and Sirac Rivers. This is a very global division, still in need of much refinement. The total number of Asmat speakers is estimated at 40,000.

In spite of much cultural common ground the Asmat form no ethnic and linguistic unit. They rather divide into four related but distinct languages and into a series of dialects.

Altogether, the Asmat now comprise about 50,000 people, of whom more than 30,000 are Central Asmat. The latter are divided into three dialects and into several sub-dialects. Nevertheless, they acknowledge a common origin: the term Asmat means both 'we, the true [sic, true] people' and 'men, originated from a tree'. ...

Identification. ... The term "Asmat" (or "As-amat") means "we the tree people." ...

Location. The Asmat live within the Indonesian province of Irian Jaya ... The geographic coordinates are approximately 6° S and 138° E. ...

Demography. It is estimated that there are approximately 50,000 Asmat people. ...

Linguistic Affiliation. The determination of which scattered groups constitute the Asmat is, in part, an artifact of outside intervention and classification processes dating to the pre-1963 era of Dutch occupation. Five dialects are spoken in the Asmat language, which is a member of the Asmat-Kamoro Family of Non-Austronesian languages. ...
