DABÉ

The tribal territory of the Dabé extends to the east of the Berrik area. A number of these Dabé, however, have migrated to the coast and are called Dabé-Pantai (Pantai meaning coast). A few of them, about thirty, remained in the interior of the Tor, where they lead a nomad life. Sometimes they join other tribes from the Tor district, such as the Berrik and especially the Bonerif. These nomadic Dabé from the interior are called Dabé-Ronto. Owing to the prolonged separation between the two Dabé tribes, differences in language have arisen. The Dabé-Ronto appear to have preserved the original language best of all, while the Dabé-Pantai, owing to close contact with the surrounding tribes of the Kwesten language area, have also linguistically been strongly influenced by these tribes. The / Dabé-Ronto, however, have adopted many Berrik and Bonerif words in their vocabulary.

- Oosterwal 1961:19-20.

*

Three other Tor groups mentioned by Oosterwal have moved away to the coast in recent years -- the Dabe, the Itik, and the Borto.

- P. Westrum 1983:276.

The Dabe left their village of Ujan, near Kondirjan on the Tor, and went to their sago acreages of Abenti in 1955. A few years later, they moved to the coastal villages of Dabe and Keder. ...
