

MANDER

Dikwijls ook treden de drie genoemde stammen [Sigi, Foja, Waris] op in vereniging met de stammen Etik en Mander, gelegen aan de Boe, een zijrivier van de Tor-rivier.

Mander

[Pop: 81]

South of the Ittik territory on the Upper Boe and Upper Foewin, stretches the territory of the Mander, which is the most southern tribe of the Tor district. Their territory is bordered by the Gauttier mountains, but where exactly the southern border of their territory lies, is unknown. The Mander, just as the other people of the Tor, do not penetrate very far into the Gauttier mountains. Yet the Mander themselves are a tribe who pushed their way into the Tor territory from the Lake Plain via the Gauttier mountains. ...

For some years past, members of the Foja tribe do also live with the Mander. The Foja's tribal territory lies east of that of the Mander between the Siir, a righthand tributary of the Boe, and the Biri. ... However, with the exception of a few families, the Foja tribe is now extinct. A number of them fled to the coast, while the others have definitively settled with the Mander.

Since the year 1958 the last Foja village -- Sirikan on the Boaf -- has also / been abandoned and so the Foja no longer exist as an autonomous tribe.

The tribal territory of the Mander is at the same time a language area. Formerly the Mander language was only spoken by the Mander,¹ but since the Foja have lived together with the Mander, they have adopted the Mander language entirely. Save for a small number of words, these Foja do not recollect any more of their own language. ...

- Oosterwal 1961:22-23.

¹ Foaro, the old korano of the Mander and a Soebar by birth, told me, that formerly the Mander and the Soebar formed together one language group. But now these Soebar are extinct, so that Foaro's (and others') statements cannot be checked anymore.

A significant amount of demographic change has occurred in the twenty years since Oosterwal's study. ... / ...

There are presently only the Kweston [sic] group with three villages, the Berik group with ten villages, the Mander with one village, and the Seger with one village. Increasing communication has resulted in greater cooperation between villages living in the area Oosterwal called Berik (the villages of Kondirjan, Dangken, Tenwer, and Somanente), and including the areas he called Safron, Beau, Waf, Daranto, and Bora-Bora (the villages of Jerim, Sansiat, Winemase, Burawater, Bore, and Tabferreh, respectively).

While we are forced to recognize a measure of distinctiveness between these last five groups and the group Oosterwal called Berik, it is important to note that all six groups refer to themselves and their language as Berik and that this division into sub-groupings is of a different order of magnitude from that which separates them all from the Kweston, the Mander and Seger. These latter do not consider themselves or their languages Berik. ...
