Nach der Schätzung von P.E. MOOLENBURGH leben auf dem See und in seiner unmittelbaren Umgebung etwa 10000 Menschen, so dass diese Gebiet als eines der am besten bevölkerten von Niederländisch-Neu-Guinea anzusehen ist. Sie verteilen sich nach seinen Ermittlungen folgendermassen auf die verschiedenen Ortschaften:

Die Sentani-Sprache wird gesprochen in den Siedelungen, welche am Sentani-See oder auf dessen bewohnten Inseln gesprochen wird. Sie ist verwandt mit der Sprache der Humboldtsbaai Bewohner, der sog. Sko-Küste und der Tanah-mera Baai, und gehört infolge dessen zu den malayo-polynesischen Sprachen. Mit den Sprachend er benachbarten Küstenstämme hat sie jedoch nichts gemeinsames.

District Sentani. Van het district Sentani dienen in de eerste plaats te worden genoemd de kampongs Ase en Ajapo, twee grote kampongs in het oostelijk deel van het meer, ... Vervolgens valt op het complex eilandjes bij de smalle doorgang van het oostelijk naar het westelijk basin, die alle dicht bevolkt zijn. Hier liggen de kampongs Iffar Besar, Iffar Ketjil, Siboi, Sere en Poejoe dicht bijeen. ... / ...

Na Iffar dienen te worden vermeld de kampongs Dojo, Baborongko en Sosiri.

- Halie 1930(1955):34-35.

Oostelijk van de Moengge-stam woont de Sentani-bevolking, die in haar geheel als één stam kan worden beschouwd. De spraak is sterk verschillend van die der Moengge's en heeft met die der Humboldtsbaai ook slechts de oervormen gemeen. ...

... Sentani. Of allen, die rondom het Sentani-meer wonen en dezelfde taal spreken, vanouds tot dezelfde stam behoord hebben, is moeilijk te zeggen. Volgens de overleveringen hebben meerdere groepen van kampongs een eigen ontstaan. Zo kan men onderscheiden:

I De groep Ase-Ajapo (in het oosten);

II De groep Iffar-Sereh-Babronko (in het midden);

III De groep Dojo (in het westen).

Voorts hebben kampongs als Poeë, Abar, Jaboeai en Sosirih-Jakonde eigen overleveringen betreffende hun afkomst. ...

¹ The word "Sentani" is not used by the natives of the district themselves, but has possibly been introduced by the coastal tribes of the Humboldt-bay. The natives themselves, while having no name for the tribe as a whole, call the Sentani Lake Bu Jaqala, "clear water."

- Cowan 1951-52:214, n. 1.

The Sentani language is spoken by some six thousand people, inhabiting the Sentani lake district near Hollandia. Roughly three dialects can be distinguished: an Eastern dialect, chiefly including the villages of Buai (vulgo: Puai), _jafo (vulgo: Ajapo) and Ohéi (vulgo: Asei); a Central dialect including the villages of the central area of the lake from N_dali (vulgo: Netaar) as far West as the western end of the strait of Fomfolo (vulgo: Simporo), and a Western dialect including the region to the west of this strait. Smaller differences of dialect exist between the several villages within each area. ...

The Sentani language belongs to the so-called "Papuan" languages, which means that it is not Malayo-Polynesian. ...

It is closely related to the language of Nafri on the Jotefa Bay -- not however to that of Tobati on the same bay, which is Melanesian -- and to the language spoken around the Tanah Merah Bay from Jonsu in the east to Bukisi in the west. East of Jonsu the Ormu language is apparently Melanesian, whereas west of Bukisi the Demta language seems to be Papuan but is quite different from Sentani. In the region between the Sentani district and the Tanah Merah Bay (from Waibron Bano to Demenggong) again a different Papuan language is spoken, apparently related to the languages of Nimboran and Gresi to the south-west of the Sentani lake.

- Cowan 1951-52:215.

The Sentani language¹ is spoken by some six thousand people, / inhabiting the Sentani Lake district in north-eastern West New Guinea. Roughly three principal dialects can be distinguished: an eastern dialect, chiefly including the villages of Buaj vulgo: Puai), ɛjafo (vulgo: Ajapo) and Ohej (vulgo: Asei); a central dialect including the villages of the central area of the lake from Nɔdali (vulgo: Netaar) as far west as the western end of the strait of Fomfolo (vulgo: Simporo), and a western dialect including the region to the west of this strait. Smaller differences of dialect exist between the various villages within each area. This grammar is concerned with the eastern dialect, more particularly that of ɛjafo.

- Cowan 1965:1-2

¹ The name "Sentani" probably originates from the coastal tribes of the Humboldt Bay. The Sentani speaking people have no name for themselves as a tribe. The Sentani lake is called by them Bu Jakala, "Clear Water".

- Cowan 1965:1, n. 1.

The Sentani language is one of a group of closely related Papuan languages, which I have named the Sentani group, and which includes Sentani proper in the Sentani Lake district, the language of Nafri on the Jotefa Bay to the east, and the language of Tanah Merah on the bay of that name to the west. It appears to be more or less distantly related to the Demta language to the west of Tanah Merah, which occupies only a small area, but seems to constitute a group by itself. Both the Sentani group and Demta seem to belong to a much larger supergroup of distantly related groups of languages, which I have named the "North Papuan phylum", and whose nearest neighbour to Sentani is the Nimboran language group. The exact nature of the relations involved in this phylum, and the position of each group, and notably of Sentani, within it, are, however, still very unclear.

The Sentani language has three dialects -- East, Central, and West -- as designated by Sentani speakers themselves. Cowan (1965) classifies the language as Non-Austronesian, and part of the Sentani-Demta group of languages. Voorhoeve (1969) goes further, and places this group of languages in the Central and South New Guinea Phylum (Trans New Guinea) on the basis of linguistic cognates and cultural similarities between them and the Asmat people, located along the south coast of Irian Jaya, Indonesia.

- Hartzler 1976:66.

² Speakers of the Sentani language live along the north coast of / the Indonesian province of Irian Jaya. Their villages are scattered along the shores, and on the islands, of Lake Sentani located adjacent to the capital city of Jayapura.

- Hartzler 1976:80-81, n. 2.

The Sentani people of Irian Jaya, numbering approximately 20,000, live on the islands and shores of Lake Sentani, situated about 20 kilometres from Jayapura, the capital city. Their language is divided into three dialects -- Eastern, Central, and Western -- and is classified as Papuan or Non-Austronesian, and as a part of the Trans-New Guinea Phylum. ...

- Hartzler 1983:175, n. 1.

¹ The Sentani people of Irian Jaya live on the islands and shores of Lake Sentani, just south of the provincial capital of Jayapura. They number around 26,000, ... The language is divided into three dialects: Eastern, Central, and Western. This study is done on the Central dialect, with people from the villages of Ifar Besar and Puyo Besar.

- Hartzler 1986:42, n. 1.

... There are thought to be currently 26,000 Sentani speakers, divided into three dialects: East, Central and West. ...

- Hartzler 1987:49.

... Tabla and Sentani, which with Nafri are designated the Sentani Group/Family (McElhanon and Voorhoeve 1970). This Sentani Family may be grouped with the Demta Family isolate to comprise a Sentani Stock within the Trans-New Guinea Phylum (Voorhoeve 1975, Wurm 1982:18, 94). ...

- Gregerson & Hartzler 1987:1.

Sentani data are from Dwight and Margate Hartzler and, for Eastern Sentani, also from Greg Kalmbacher (UNCEN-SIL). There are approximately 26,000 speakers of Sentani and three dialects: Eastern, Central, and Western. ...
