The people of the eastern side of the Tedi are the Awinkaruk (not Awikaruk); on the western side as far north as Birimkapa, are the Iongomkaruk. The tribe around the Birim river, but north of the junction, call themselves Kaikaruk; while those along the Tedi and to the north of Birimkapa are Woröm. YONGGOM (Yongom) is spoken along the Fly and Tedi (Alice) Rivers, mainly in Papua. Two villages of Yonggom speakers also live on the shores of Lake Murray. The 19578 census figures have been analyzed to show 2,000 Yonggom speakers in Papua. It is assumed that there are very few in Irian Barat, and any that are there would have been counted above as speakers of Southern Kati, a closely related language. Yonggom word lists available include 100 words by the author from Oya No. 2, 90 words by Assistant District Officer J.W. Kent from Watakum, and 110 words by Austen from both Marapka and Ort Ambip.

There is no reliable information on the number of Yonggom speakers in Irian Jaya and their villages. In Papua New Guinea, Yonggom villages are: Kungim, Opka, Garandimok, Kungembit, Birimkamba, Ambaga 2, Kundubiran, Marapka, Timin, Kweman, Ot, Atkamba, Aran, Konkonda, Kawok, Erehta, Nago, Buseki. The list is probably not complete.

Current classifications suggest that the Yonggom speak three different languages (e.g. Healey 1964, Voorhoeve 1975, Silzer and Heikkinen 1984). These languages have been referred to as North Kati (or Kati-Ninati), South Kati (also Digoleesch or Kati-Metomka), and Yonggom. This classification, however, is based on limited data and appears to be inconsistent. ... / ...

The Yonggom say they speak a single language (weng mimo), which is composed of a number of named dialects that are, for the most part, mutually intelligible. The naming of the dialects is complicated by two factors: (1) there has been extensive population movement since pacification, so that the dialects are not coterminous with discrete territories, and (2) the Yonggom names for the different dialects are sometimes used as directional terms, so that a name which connotes "the language spoken by the people to the north" is applied differently depending upon the position of the speaker. Despite these difficulties, I propose the following provisional classification of Yonggom dialects, based on a loose consensus among the speakers of the language:

(1) Kataut: Spoken only in the northern-most Muyu area in Irian Jaya, from Kopko to the north.

(2) Middle Yonggom: Spoken in the northern villages in Papua New Guinea, as well as the Lake Murray villages (Nago and Buseki). Spoken in Irian Jaya from Kawangtet to Metomka (Corresponds with South Kati).

(3) Kabom or Kagaip: In Papua New Guinea, spoken from Yogi village south to Atkamba (including Dome) and in Kawok and Moian. Extends northwest into Irian Jaya to Ninati (Corresponds with North Kati).

(4) Ok Pari: Spoken in the Papua New Guinea villages of Erehta, Membok, and Karengu. Also spoken in Irian Jaya from Mindiptana south along the Kao River. /

The Yonggom recognize and name additional, localized speech varieties as well. For example, the language spoken by the people who lived along the Ok Tedi River between Dome and Atkamba prior to pacification is called Derian, and is recognized as a variety of what I have referred to as Middle Yonggom. Certain language varieties are also more difficult for some people to understand than others; for example, a Kataut speaker finds it difficult to communicate with a speaker of Ok Pari. More detailed linguistic study would probably show that Yonggom language is composed of a dialect chain running roughly north to south. Currently the language is undergoing change in the direction of Middle Yonggom.

(KATI)

Going down the river Digul we meet the tributary Ka° on the left. This name Ka° is a corruption of the native word Kowo. One of the affluents of the Kowo is the river Muju. The tribes living between Muju and Ka° are called Mujunese by the Dutch Government and the Catholic Mission. In their own language there is no such word as indicates the whole of the tribes, but they are called Qa^uti by the Jaqaⁱ-people, living in the basin of the river Mapi; and Ghawisi by the A^uju-people, living between the Digul and the Mapi. The territory, where the Qa^uti-people live, has not yet been described, nor has the number of the dialects already been fixed. The population has been concentrated in villages only for a short time; the local differences in speech are innumerable. Drabbe has been able to ascertain two dialects viz. the dialects of Niinati, a village on the Muju, and of Metomka, situated to the south of the village of Kiptem. The names Ghawisi and Qa^uti are related to the word kati, which according to Drabbe in the dialect of Niinati means "real man"; therefore Drabbe speaks of this language as the Kati-language. We analyse the Niinati-dialect.

- Boelaars 1950:77.

De mensen zelf die de Kati-taal spreken hebben geen algemene naam om volk of taal aan te duiden. Door de Jaqa^j's in het stroomgebied van de Mapi-rivier echter, en door de Awju's die voornamelyk wonen tussen Digul en Mapi worden ze genoemd resp. Qàw^{ti} en Chàw^{isi}. Deze namen staan hoogstwaarschynlyk in verband met het Kati woord kati, dat in het Niinati-dialect betekent "echte mens"; in het Metomka-dialect spreekt men van katuk ti. Eigenlyk past in de mond der Kati's dat woord op alle Papoea's, in tegenstelling met het woord okan, dat gerbuikt wordt voor overzeese vreemdelingen. By gebrek aan beter duiden we dus het volk te dat woont tussen de Kao, een linkerzyrivier van de Digul, en de Muju die weer een zyrvier is van de Kao aan het de naam Kati, met de toon op de laatste lettergreep. De naam Kao is een verbastering van vreemdelingen, en de eigenlyke naam is Kowo; de Muju wordt dialectisch ook wel Ok-Mii genoemd. ... We bespreken hier twee verschillende dialecten; het eerste wordt gesproken in de omtrek van Niinati aan de Muju, zowel ten Oosten als ten Westen van die rivier. Het tweede spreekt men aan de Kowo, en verder in alle dorpen ten Zuiden van het dorp Jiptem. Een overgang van de twee vindt men te Namat, Mokbiran en Wambiran. Het eerste noemen we Niinati-dialect, het tweede Metomka-dialect naar de dorpen van onze zegslui. Behalve dat er twee duidelyk onderscheiden dialecten zyn, moeten we nog opmerken, dat tengevolge van de vroegere woonwyze der Kati's de taal van het ene dorp tot het andere nog al verschilt. ...

- Drabbe 1954:150.

Katì is spoken by tribes living between the Kòwo (or Kao) and the Mùju Rivers, the latter being one of the tributaries of the Kòwo, itself a tributary of the Digul River. The tribes -- referred to as Muju people by the Dutch administration -- have no word in their language naming all / of them in bulk, but are called Qawti by the Jaqàj, and Ghàwisi by the Àwju. Both names can perhaps be linked with the word katì which, in the Niinatì dialect of Katì, means "real man". The language falls into a great number of dialects of which Father DRABBE describes two, i.e. the Niinatì dialect spoken on both sides of the Mùju River in and near the village of Niinatì situated on the bank of the river, and the Metòmka dialect spoken on the banks of the Kòwo (or Kao) and in all villages to the south of the village of Jiptèm, Metòmka being one of these villages. There are, however, marked local differences in the language of each village throughout the whole Katì area.

SOUTHERN KATI (Southern Muju) is spoken on the lower Moejoe River in Irian Barat by perhaps 4,000 people. The language spoken by the Kowan people on the Fly River at its westernmost point may well be a dialect of Southern Kati, but no sample of their speech is available to the author. The most detailed study of Southern Kati was that made of the Metomka dialect by Fr. P. Drabbé. . . another dialect was [studied] by Geurtjens under the name "Digoeleesch". He claimed that this dialect was spoken on the Digoel River north of the Bian River. However, this area now seems to be uninhabited and / the present location of the speakers of this dialect is unknown to the author (unless they should prove to be the Kowan people). Another specimen of Southern Kati is the list of 110 words collected by Austen from the village of Anu.

Moejoeërs.

Deze bevolkingsgroep is het belangrijkste. Haar woongebied ligt ten oosten van de Kao. In het zuiden strekt dit gebied zich uit tot in het Australisch deel van Nieuw-Guinea tot aan de bestuurspost Kiungga. Op de hoogte van Ninati wordt de grens ongeveer gevormd door de kali Birim en de kali Mat. Ten oosten van deze rivieren wonen de Ninggeroem.

In het noord-westen van de onderafdeling, waar de Kao oostwaarts buigt, wonen de Moejoeërs ook ten westen van de Kao. Bombien is een gemengde Moejoe-Mandobokampong. Maikkoeboen, Welkosikibi en Amjolkesan zijn Moejoenederzettingen. Typische is hier de bijna noord-zuid lopende grens tussen beide groepen. De bevolking in het stroomgebied van de Oost Digoel (ten noorden van de Kao) en de Ok Iwoer vertonen overeenkomsten zowel naar uiterlijk, kleding als oppervlakkig waarneembare gewoonten met de Moejoe bevolking in de noordelijkste Moejoekampongs w.o. Okjan. De mensen van Ikjan hebben ook contacten met de Katèmtaman en de bevolking tussen Ok Iwoer en de Oost Digoel. De taal van de Katèmkaman is goed verstaanbaar voor Moejoeërs uit Ikjan, Toemoetoe, Waroemgi e.a. noordelijke kampongs.

De Katèmkaman hebben op hun beurt weer contacten met de bevolking langs de Digoel en in de Sibilvallei. Deze bevolkingsgroepen kunnen elkaar verstaan. ...

The Mandobo live east of the Dogul, between Tanah Merah and Mindiptana. Farther to the east, beyond the Kaoh river, begins the territory of the Muyu people. It extends from Mindiptana to the Mountains.

Identification. The Muyu live just south of the central mountains of Irian Jaya, just along the border with Papua New Guinea. The name Muyu is taken from the Muyu River, a tributary of the Kao River, itself a tributary of the Digul River.

Location. The Muyu area is between 5° and 7° S and 140°5' and 141°E. The Muyu people originally inhabited the hilly country between the central highlands and the plains of the south coast. ...

Demography. In 1956 the Muyu people numbered 12,223. ...

Linguistic Affiliation. The Muyu speak dialects of Kati in the Ok Family of Papuan languages. ...

- Schoorl 1993:[xvi].

... With the exception of the villages of Toge and Kuken on its west bank, the Kao River forms the western boundary of the area they [Muyu] inhabit. But these villages were formed after 1935.

The northern boundary is hard to define. ... For the time being it would seem correct to draw the line through Walikubun and Kwitbon.

The eastern boundary is found mainly by the Mat, Birim, Terry, and Fly rivers. The Mat is a tributary of the Birim that in turn flows into the Terry, and this is a tributary of the Fly.

Some Muyu settlements are also found east of the Terry and the Fly, almost as far as the government post at Kiungga in Papua New Guinea. However, most of these settlements were formed by Muyu from what used to be Dutch territory, who for some reason fled their original area.

The southern boundary coincides more or less with that of the onderafdeling [i.e., the Kao/Digul junction].

- Schoorl 1993:7.

... there certainly were dialectal differences between the Ninati dialect and the language spoken in Tumutu and surrounding villages. Because the Muyu used to be so dispersed, and had so many relations that did not depend on dialectal differences, no clear-cut dividing lines can be drawn in their area.

- Schoorl 1993:9.
